Tim Carr has been a public affairs consultant with leading consultancies, both large and small, since 1991 and has worked as an independent consultant since 2013. He has advised MASS on government relations, political engagement and media relations since 2011.

He has extensive experience in delivering public affairs programmes across a wide range of sectors, including financial services, energy, defence and transport. He is particularly specialised in legislative procedure and reputation management, often in highly regulated business sectors, handling complex issues.

Tim has co-edited two books with Biteback Publishing, The Politicos Guide to the New House of Commons in 2015 and 2017 following both General Elections. An earlier report on the newly elected MPs at the 2010 General Election attracted numerous national press articles and several media appearances.

Born and bred in London, Tim now lives in Hampshire with his wife and two young boys. He studied Politics and History at Manchester Polytechnic, graduating in 1990. Away from work, he suffers supporting Newcastle United, has a keen interest in ancient history and is an active member of a local church.
